Early Settlers' Association.

JULY 21, 1900.

The annual meeting of the Early Settlers' Association of Cuyahoga County was held at Association Hall, July 21st, 1900.

The meeting was called to order by the President, Hon. Edwin T. Hamilton.

The chaplain, Rev. J. D. Jones, offered the following prayer:

OPENING PRAYER BY CHAPLAIN JONES.

Our heavenly Father, we come before Thee in the name of Thy Blessed Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. We come to thank Thee for Thy blessings and mercies as we have been permitted to enjoy them all the days of our lives. We thank Thee for what the Gospel of thy Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, has been to the Western Reserve and the State of Ohio, and to our land and to the world. We thank Thee for the precepts and examples that have been set to us by the aged people who are assembled here today and by those that have already gone before. We ask Thee today, O God, that Thou wilt grant a special blessing to us Thy children. We pray Thee that we may be led by Thy spirit into the paths of love and peace and service in the name of Jesus Christ. We pray Thee for a blessing upon our organization, the Early Settlers of the Western Reserve. We pray Thee that Thou wilt grant that our last days may be our best days.

Some of this company during the past year have been bereaved of their companions and are still mourning and sorrowing because of those Thou hast called to Thyself. We pray Thee that Thou wilt comfort them and sustain them; that Thou wilt make them know that the arms of Thy loving grace and power are about them. We ask Thee for a special blessing upon any who at this time are afflicted and sorrowing. Some may be upon beds of pain; some of our members may be very near to the dark valley of the shadow of death. We pray that Thou wilt be with them, that Thou wilt comfort them, and that Thy holy spirit will be in their hearts.

We ask Thy blessing upon all the services of this day, and grant that we may so live in this life that we shall meet again in a better world saved, redeemed, blessed and comforted by the presence of Thy Son.

Hear us in our petitions. We ask the pardon of every sin, and grace for every trial, in the name of Jesus Christ, Thy beloved Son, Amen.

The Odeon Quartet then sang "Auld Lang Syne."

President Hamilton then delivered his annual address, as follows:

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT HAMILTON.

My Friends: Today we have again met to hold the annual reunion of the Old Settlers' Association of this county. In honor of the day on which Moses Cleveland and his party first landed here, the 22nd of the present month is the day set apart for our regular annual meeting; but we meet today, the 21st, because tomorrow is the Sabbath. This year is also the 21st in the life of this Association; but while the Society has thus attained its majority in years, yet in its membership it is fast losing its more immediate touch and relationship with the earlier settlements made here. No man or woman now survives whose eyes beheld the original and untouched grandeur of our native forests, and most of the generation next removed from the pioneers of 1796 have passed away, and it is only but very few who yet remain to tell us from their personal observation of the life and times of this locality from 1820 to 1840. Before that time tradition and history has already come to be our only guide.

I, therefore, especially congratulate you that today from this platform we shall have presented to us by some of our eldest members a pen and word picture of our city and state as they appeared to their actual vision and experience, at periods so remote as to be beyond the recollection of most of us ; and we shall thus be able to preserve in our annals to ourselves and the future, many local facts of interest, to all, which otherwise must in the course of Nature soon pass away with their present custodians. Yearly the thinning ranks of those who can tell us of the old days of the early settlements here remind us that we must seek and carefully preserve the utterances of these veteran members ; and I especially bespeak for those of them who shall this day favor us with their recollections, your earnest and undivided attention.

At every annual meeting your Secretary reports a long list of the names of members who have passed away during the year succeeding the previous annual meeting. He will do so on this occasion, and the list will be found to contain the names of 19 of our members who were with us last year. The eldest of these was Mrs. Ann Norton, who was a frequent attendant at our meetings, and who died in this city on June 8, 1900, at the great age of 97 years, having been born in New York in 1803. We all remember the genial presence and the delightful personality of this old lady, as she met with us from time to time, and received from all who knew her the respect and reverence which her honored life and years richly merited.

Nine persons in this list had either reached or passed the age of four score years, which is indeed a remarkable proportion of our dead for the year, who had attained so great a longevity of life and argues well for the constitutional vigor, steady habits and self-care of the members of this Society.

One year ago, Gen. J. J. Elwell was present and addressed you, as he had been accustomed to do at nearly all, if not every annual meeting for many years, but he too is dead. His presence at our meetings was so constant ; his personality so venerable ; his tall form so conspicuous, and his voice so often heard here, that no one of us all can fail to note his absence, and to realize that this Society has indeed lost a useful member, that a monumental figure in the Church and State has fallen, and that a true patriot, a good citizen, and a genial, kind and good old man is no more.

I regret that I have not the data from which to give a more complete summary of his long and useful life. Briefly, however, I find he was a native of this State, born in 1820, and died in this city on March 13, 1900. He was educated in the schools and colleges of the Reserve; came of Huegenot and Revolutionary ancestry; was a graduate of the Cleveland Medical College, and was admitted to the Bar of Ohio in 1854, and practiced his profession of law until the breaking out of the Civil War in 1861, when he enlisted in the army; but for four years prior to his enlistment he was editor of the Western Law Monthly, and during that time he wrote a work on medical jurisprudence, treating of malpractice and medical evidence, which was published and recognized as an authority in the courts, and has passed through several editions since. He was in the Union Army from 1861 to 1866, and for gallant and meritorious service was four times promoted and came out of the service with the rank of Brevet-Brigadier-General. Since that, by reason of injuries received in the war, and the weight of advancing years, he has not practiced his chosen profession of the law; but possessed of a competency has attended to his own personal affairs, served as a Commissioner for the erection of the Cuyahoga County Soldiers' and Sailors' Monument, and also as a corresponding member of the Medical Legal Society of New York. His eventful life has thus closed with the respect and esteem of his countrymen, and his name will henceforth be enrolled with those of our honored dead.

I have now no suitable data from which to speak further of members who have departed during the past year, but I trust that others who have will prepare appropriate sketches of their lives, that they may appear in due time in the future publications of our Annals. I can only now say of them in the words of the gentle and gifted Whittier, "God calls our loved ones, but we lose not wholly what He hath given. They live on earth in thought and deed, as truly, as in His heaven."

And let us not repine that we are growing old. A noted divine once said, "Old age is blessed, if allowed to come naturally. The grandest things in all the universe are old. Old mountains, old hills, old rivers, old seas and an old eternity," and let me add, the best antiquity of all is a good old man or woman, for they are immortal—and that thought cheered and solaced the world long before the light of the Christian era. In the beautiful drama of Ion, the hope of immortality, so eloquently uttered by the death devoted Greek, finds deep response in every thoughtful soul. When about to yield his life a sacrifice to fate, his Clematthe asks, if they should meet again, to which he responds, "I have asked that dreadful question of the hills that look eternal—of the clear streams that flow forever—of stars among whose fields of azure my raised spirits have walked in glory. All are dumb. But as I gaze upon thy living face, I feel that there is something in love that mantles through its beauty, that can not wholly perish. We shall meet again, Clematthe.

May I not, therefore, express the hope that we may each grow into a serene and happy old age; that we may yet meet here in many pleasant reunions, and that the sunset of our life on earth may peacefully glide into the glorious morn of a joyous and eternal day.

And now, my friends, although the startling events developing at the present hour in the old world present profound problems to the civilization of the age and the governments of all nations, and awaken the deepest interest in every thoughtful soul, I shall not now presume to detain you by any reflections of my own, and excusing myself from making any formal address, shall, with your consent, allot such time as we may have to our friends who have so kindly consented to address us on this occasion.

A. J. Williams, Chairman of the Executive Committee, then read the following report:

REPORT OF EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE.

Cleveland, O., July 21, 1900.

To the Early Settlers' Association of Cuyahoga County:

Your Executive Committee respectfully submits the following report:

The Committee congratulates the Association that its venerable and beloved Vice-president, Mrs. J. A. Harris, now over 90 years of age, is with us today, giving cheer to us all.

The Early Settlers' Association is not maintained without cost. The social enjoyment it affords to its members is amply worth the small cost of one dollar a year. Aside from that, the collection and preservation of historic matters published yearly in the Annals of the Association is of more value than all the cost. Still your committee feels justified renewing what it said last year, to-wit:

"The Executive Committee regrets to state that there are many members who enjoy the honor of membership and have their names appear annually in our published Annals, yet who, although abundantly able, contribute nothing to the maintenance of the Association unless they are personally visited and tendered a copy of the Annals and begged to contribute a dollar to help defray necessary expenses, and even then the collector often meets with an insulting refusal. It costs money to run this Association, and no member should wait for the collector. If such member fail to attend our annual reunion and there contribute, he certainly should promptly remit his dues to the treasurer, Mr. Dodge."

The publication of the foregoing in our last Annals, seems to have had little or no effect. Our efficient collector, Mr. Hubert W. Frost, by much labor, collected from delinquents sufficient to pay up the indebtedness of the Association and pay for the publication of the Annals.

So far as your committee have been able to ascertain, the following is a list of members who have passed from earth since our last annual meeting, with dates of their death:

It has been our practice to publish in the Annals short biographical sketches of deceased members.

It cannot be expected that this practice will continue unless the friends of the deceased will furnish such sketches to the Secretary, Mr. Henry C. Hawkins.

For the financial standing of the Association, reference is had to the report of the Treasurer.

Respectfully submitted,

A. J. WILLIAMS, Chairman.

On motion of the Executive Committee was unanimously approved and ordered placed on file.

The Treasurer, Wilson S. Dodge, then presented his annual report as follows:

W. S. DODGE, Treasurer.

On motion of Rev. J. D. Jones, the foregoing report was approved and ordered placed on file.

The President then announced that the election of officers for the ensuing year was in order.

Reverend Lathrop Cooley moved that the present officers of the Association, including the Executive Committee, be retained for the coming year, and that the rules be suspended and that they be elected by acclamation. The motion was seconded and carried unanimously.

The quartet then sang "Heigh Ho, I Love You."

President Hamilton then introduced R. T. Lyon, Esq., of Cleveland, who addressed the Association as follows:

ADDRESS OF R. T. LYON.

In referring to the early settlement of our city we are favored with quite full and accurate accounts of our own state of Ohio, and considerable thought has been expended by others in the early history of Cleveland. We are indebted to Mr. Charles Whittlesey for these early recollections, which have been given so fully, more than perhaps to any one person. It is due to the efforts and memory of Mr. Henry Howe that we have so complete historical and geographical reviews of the state. These volumes were published in 1846-1886, are now owned by the people, and can only be procured through the Secretary of State, and an edition should be secured by every good citizen. From these we learn that the southern portion of Ohio was settled some twelve years earlier than at the north, bordering on Lake Erie. Along the Ohio river emigration and settlements were made as early as 1788, while on the Reserve not much progress, if any, was made prior to 1800. The direction of the people to the west appears to have started from Pennsylvania, Virginia and Maryland, owing, perhaps, to the better roads, and emigrants availing themselves of the numerous streams that offered an easy journey to points further along the Ohio; and the richness of the soil bordering on these rivers was a valid inducement for a permanent abode in that locality. Later the survey of the country bringing into market the lands of the Connecticut Land Co., settlements began to be made at the north, and the early history makes mention of the surveys of this city and counties adjacent. Mention is made of locations at Conneaut creek, while the parties appear to have divided and a portion to have followed the surveying commission under Moses Cleaveland to the Cuyahoga river. The struggle for existence at Cleveland was slow, the land in the immediate vicinity poor, the forest timber light, the soil mostly sandy, and trees of small oaks or oak openings. In the vicinity of Euclid, Newburg and Brooklyn the land was more fertile and better adapted for raising crops. Hence, our New England people, having been educated to farming, were more inclined to follow their former vocations, more familiar to previous education in tilling the soil. These experiences increased the growth of the country back from the lake in the near vicinity, at the expense of Cleveland on the early start, but as the country developed and products of the soil increased beyond what was needed for home consumption, some means had to be provided for the sale of this surplus elsewhere.

At an early date the few merchants here bought their goods mostly in Philadelphia, Pa., and transported them across the mountains, and in return for payment of their bills of goods, sent back by large four or six-horse teams pot and pearl ashes, skins, furs and beeswax as an offset to these credits. But the city was slow in growth; the number of inhabitants in 1824 was but 250. This was the year of my arrival at Cleveland, being then five years of age. The increased shipments destined for a market abroad, induced the people to seek some method to improve our harbor and transportation facilities, and about that time, or soon after, an appropriation was secured from Congress for $5,000 for that purpose through the influence of Mr. A. W. Walworth, who was customs officer of the port. With this project in view and the establishment of a canal from Cleveland to Portsmouth, our prosperity was assured.

This was the great stimulus to our business prospects, and from this time forward our growth was permanent, but gradual and healthy, which has resulted in a permanent establishment of Cleveland as a commercial and manufacturing city. In our infancy we had little encouragement or hopes for these results. Our harbor was obstructed, and the lands for farming purposes did not warrant a speedy settlement for agricultural pursuits, and up to 1830, at about the time the canal was opened, the United States census was but 1,075. Our Cuyahoga creek was a poor substitute for a navigable river, and, viewing the resources for a commercial city, in my opinion, we were much behind Ashtabula, Conneaut, Fairport and Black River (now Lorain). Those streams were wider, had better depth of water, and not so much obstructed with logs and driftwood as our creek; and it was the energy of our citizens and of a few who exercised influence in our state and national affairs that opened up a chain of improvements that established our welfare. The building of the Ohio canal and extension of the piers with more depth of water, were the main inducements that led to commercial progress and the settlement of our city. We owe thanks to Elias Sims and Pat

Smith for the part they took in the work of extracting the logs and digging up the mud with their pile drivers and dredging machines.

Up to the year 1825 there were but few firms located on the river, and little coasting trade in progress. Mr. Noble H. Merwin settled here from Connecticut about the year 1815, but unlike other emigrants from that state, he had been brought up as a merchant, and following up his early training he built a warehouse at the foot of Superior street and established a produce, commission and shipping house at that point, as well as a hotel on the corner of Superior and South Water streets (then Vineyard lane). Mr. Merwin entered into a produce business at once; contracting supplies for the United States government, Indians and Hudson Bay Co. He also purchased some 100 acres of land on what then was called the Ox Bow, embracing all the land extending south from Superior street, and inclosed by the bend in the Cuyahoga river, on which are now laid out Merwin, Columbus, James, West, Leonard, Center (then Division) and connections. This territory was solely occupied at the time for grazing purposes and production of hay, which was required in filling his contracts as above stated, in connection with which he had established a slaughtering and packing house on Merwin street, at or near the location of Monson's fish house. The rear part of that building is the same old structure used by Mr. Merwin at that time, and which I consider the oldest building on the river, if not in the city. To further fulfill the carrying out of these contracts, there was erected by Mr. Merwin sheds for hulling corn in wood ashes, or lye, to soften the kernel and removing the hull, rendering it palatable. The corn, after being dried in these sheds, was packed in sacks and made ready for transportation. Considerable quantities of pork, beef and candles were required for use in these engagements for government and Indian supplies, and for the delivery of the same vessels of small tonnage had to be utilized for delivering at the different stations these products—Fort Gratiot, Mackinac, Green Bay, Chicago, Detroit and Sault Ste.

Marie, and for this purpose Mr. Merwin built the schooners Minerva and Mariner and had secured the schooner Detroit. These were all small craft of from sixty to seventy-five tons burden, commanded respectively by Captains Clifford Belden, Lyman Beckley and Stiles. The latter says: "I am indebted to him for my passage from Detroit to Cleveland on the schooner Detroit in the year 1824; the promise stands good, and I am ready to pay the agreed price of a turkey whenever I shall meet the captain."

The Minerva was built at the corner of Superior and Merwin streets, and the Mariner at the corner of Merwin and Division (now Center street), about where the Center street bridge is now being erected. Mr. Merwin discontinued keeping his hotel about the year 1826, and erected a large, commodious brick dwelling on the brow of the hill in the rear of the hotel, at about where Long street intersects South Water street, then called Vineyard lane, where he had a fine view of the canal and all his vast estate and commercial interests. About this time he took into partnership Mr. Charles M. Gidings of Syracuse, N. Y., a gentleman of fine business qualifications, an eminent accountant, an aggressive merchant, and an educated gentleman. The firm then was Merwin & Gidings, afterwards Gidings & Baldwin, and then Gidings, Baldwin, Pease & Co. About the year 1829 Mr. Merwin's health gave out, and he went on a journey to recuperate with his eldest son, George, to the West India Islands, and died at the Isle of St. Thomas with consumption in the fall of 1829.

As competitors in the same branch of business, they had Mr. John Blair, who arrived here in 1819 from Pennsylvania, and located at the foot of Superior street, on the premises now occupied by the Detroit & Cleveland Transportation Co. Messrs. Kelley and Walworth were also doing business at the foot of St. Clair street, afterwards at the foot of Lighthouse street. Levi Johnson was also stationed near the foot of St. Clair street, but was more particularly interested in shipbuilding, and at an early date built the steamer Enterprise, a craft that was a credit to the energy and skill of Mr. Johnson as a ship carpenter at this early date. Previous to this came the Kelleys, Walworths, Long, and Williamsons, the latter being owners of a large tannery on the river between Superior and St. Clair streets; the Kelley and Williamson families living on Water street and being owners of much property also on South Superior, with Dr. Long, who resided in this section, and who built good dwellings on these lots extending to the Cuyahoga river. This property was located between the American house, as it is now, and Seneca street, while they had interests at different locations.

Mr. Alfred Kelley, the friend and master spirit of our Ohio canal system, was born in Middletown, Connecticut, in 1789. He removed to New York state when nine years of age, and was educated at Fairfield Academy, New York. He studied law with Jonas Platt; he came to Cleveland in 1810, and was appointed prosecuting attorney on his twenty-first birthday, and retained the position until 1821.

In 1814 Mr. Kelley was elected to the Ohio House of Representatives, then holding its sessions at Chillicothe. Judge Alfred Yaple says of him in an article published in Howe's History of Ohio, that he took an early and deep interest in our canal policy. He urged it as a necessary means of developing the resources of the state. He advocated and aided it, and it was eminently a success. When the system was finally decided upon it was generally supposed that the contemplated works could not be completed within the limits of the estimated cost, or during the lives of any then living. He having been the prime mover in this undertaking, having framed the statutes, was made an active canal commissioner. He accepted the trust, abandoned his profession, took charge of the undertaking, and the work was well done and within the appropriation. The route of the canal was well chosen. It did not appear to be the object of the legislature to find the shortest and most direct line to the Ohio river, but it was well calculated to serve the interest of the people in general (the farmers) and pick up the most available streams and rivers, with their rich soil and bottom lands, besides creating connections with our best cities and towns by the improvements of lateral canals and slackwater accessories. The side cut to Dresden opened up the trade with the Muskingum river. The Hocking canal, from Roscoe, assured the support of that rich valley. The feeder from Lockburn, eleven miles, to Columbus, gave us connection with our state capital. The bottom lands of the Tuscarawas and Scioto valleys, rich with their products, added to the large stream of exports including the coal deposits of these and other counties adjacent, added largely to the business of the main canal. The southern terminus of this great artery at Portsmouth gave us an outlet with the Ohio and Mississippi rivers and the extensive trade of the country and cities located on these streams.

Now, as to the location of the northern terminus of this vast improvement, why should Cleveland have been selected as the outlet and a connection with Lake Erie? The odds were against us. Black river at Lorain and Chagrin river at Fairport presented equally fair facilities, if not better accommodations for a harbor than our own; indeed, the Cuyahoga was known in those days as a creek with a depth of water ranging about six to eight feet, and to its source filled with logs and rubbish. It was a turbulent and wicked stream, caused by rains and melting snows in the spring, and dry during the summer months. Summit county is some 300 feet higher than Lake Erie and it requires some thirty-six locks to reach Akron.

I think from the fact that Alfred Kelley and his family connections owned considerable property in the city, and his extensive influence, coupled with the fact of his matured judgment, brought the outlet to Cleveland, and it might have been through the surveyors looking to the need of a water supply to furnish the canal from the Cuyahoga river. I have heard it stated that the design at first was to retain the canal bed on higher ground or summit of level, instead of the river bed or bottoms on its entrance to the city. This would necessitate locking down to the water level within the corporate limits of the city, with about ten locks situated on the line of Michigan or Champlain streets, and giving our city the facilities of large and extensive water power within our border ; but this was given up by the surveyors, perhaps for the same reason above stated.

There are some thirty-six locks between Cleveland and Akron. The two locks entering the river were double the size of the others. One, located on Merwin street, locked down directly into the river ; the other, on South Water, was planned to give facilities for vessels to reach and make use of the drydock located near the foot of Seneca street. Not many sail vessels ever occupied this dock, for the capacity of the lake craft in dimensions and tonnage soon rendered these facilities inadequate ; but for a long time canalboats found the dock quite necessary and convenient. These two large locks cost quite a large sum of money, and I have heard it stated that the outlay on them was nearly as large as the cost on all the other locks to Akron. The heavy cost incurred was in fixing a foundation, and the contractors met with difficulty with quicksand, and had to do a large amount of pumping and driving spiles. The canal was completed to Akron in 1827, but I doubt if boats locked into the river until these two large locks were completed, in 1829, and was not fully open to Portsmouth until 1832.

During the digging of the canal the town was very unhealthy. The disturbing of the soil and upturning of the earth produced much fever and ague, and in 1832 we were visited with the cholera, and there were hardly sufficient well people to take care of the sick. We were without sewerage, except surface drainage, and I can recollect seeing a copious sprinkling of lime in the gutters in all parts of the business streets. But about the year 1832 business began to recuperate ; farmers began to feel the effects of a cheaper and better mode of getting their produce to the east, and a market. Emigration from New England and New York to Ohio and Michigan was beyond all expectations. Every facility was brought into use to forward the crowd to their destinations. Vessels, steamers and canalboats were built to take advantage of this unlooked for improvement in trade. Our city felt the effects of it, and with the movement of the tillers of the soil came merchants and mechanics. Our state soon became settled up and population increased; the products of the soil and increased results of the grain crops soon were pressing for the east and a market. To meet this sudden demand for transportation canalboats were towed up the lake from Buffalo, and the small towns between us and Akron on the line of the river entered into the boat building business, and it was said they built boats by the mile, and when one was required they sawed it off at a proper length and boarded up the ends.

The first boats engaged in trade to my recollection were owned by Merwin & Gidings—the Allen Trimble from the Erie canal, and the Pioneer, built at Peninsula, O. Mr. John Blair had at the same time the Henry Clay, and conspicuously lettered on the side of this boat was this inscription in large letters: “Henry Clay Farmer’s Line. Night and Day.” I think this boat was also towed up the lake from the Erie canal. Business houses increased rapidly from this time to 1840. In 1836 we reached the climax of prosperity. Real estate was much inflated, and during 1837 the bubble burst, and we had a real estate famine. The effect of our trade and emigration was felt not only in Ohio, but also in Michigan and the west. Conspicuous during this period we had many noted business men as forwarders and commission merchants of energy, education and thrift, all eager to fill and help on the tide of prosperity. Steamers, sail vessels and canalboats were built and pressed into service and lines formed for transportation eastward and westward to the north and south. In fact, the pressure and nature of employment was much like that on our railroad system. The northern portion of Ohio was much interested in raising wheat. The soil and climate were particularly adapted to this purpose. The old and popular kind known as the Genesee white wheat or “blue stem” was raised in New York state had served a purpose. But about the year 1838 there was introduced in this region a quality known as Mediterranean; it had a large kernel, quite full, but very hard and with transparent inside, and free from starchy substance. This wheat was thrifty and yielded thirty to forty bushels per acre, while the old "blue stem" produced but fifteen to twenty. This new species was not popular at first, but by constant cultivation it became amber in color and more soft and starchy, with sufficient gluten to make it very freely used and much desired by millers and what is now known as the very popular amber or red winter wheat.

The introduction of this quality of wheat into the market in large quantities, and its being essential to the manufacture of a high grade of flour, brought numerous buyers into the Cleveland market—some permanently, while others located with us occasionally. Much inconvenience was manifested in disposing of the receipts of grain; sellers and buyers were obliged to come together on the dock, in our offices, or at the hotels evenings. But with the increase of business it became necessary to facilitate trade, and this was the result of the formation of the Cleveland board of trade in 1847. I might say here that the old blue stem or white wheat is now entirely out of use, and the quotations now used call for only the red amber winter and western spring.

At this time there were engaged in business on the river as produce and shipping merchants, grocers and ship chandlers and supply stores, some twenty firms, among which I can mention the names of Gillespie, Joyce & Co., George C. Davis, Griffith, Pease & Co., Robert H. Backus, Bronson & Hewitt, George A. Foster, Hutchinson, Goodman & Co., John E. Lyon, W. G. Oatman, A. Penfield, Ransom, Baldwin & Co., J. L. Weatherby, R. Winslow & Co., Barstow & Co., Ross & Lemen, Smyth & Clary, Beebe, Allen & Co. and A. S. Cramer & Co.

Mr. S. S. Stone wishing to form a house here to work in connection with O. Bosterwick & Co. of Montreal, and Kissam, Stone & Co. of New York, selected Mr. I. L. Hewitt and myself to form this connection. Mr. Stone advanced the capital and acted as special and silent partner in completing the firm of Hewitt & Lyon. This arrangement worked satisfactorily and with success. We occupied the warehouse built by Mr. O. H. Perry (son of Mr. Nathan Perry), some 200 feet south from the Winslow property; but in the season of 1845 we removed a few doors south from this to the Richmond property, occupying one-half of the warehouse with Mr. W. J. Gordon on the lot now the property of the Cleveland & Buffalo Transit Co.

On the failure of our eastern connections and the withdrawal of Mr. Stone, Mr. Hewitt and myself concluded to continue the business, and up to 1847 did fairly well and prospered. But owing to differences in trade and mode of business, the firm of Hewitt & Lyon was dissolved, Mr. Hewitt retaining the old associations and Mr. Lyon removing to Merwin street, where he has been located from 1847 to 1899—a period of fifty-two years, or fifty-eight years in business on the river. During the interval the firm has had but few changes. In 1868 his son, Mr. R. S. Lyon, was taken in as partner, and the firm name changed to R. T. Lyon & Son. This was continued for a number of years until the removal of the son to Chicago, where he has remained to this time in active trade.

The changes in business by the introduction of railroads has worked a wonder in the transportation and commission affairs of our city, and the same can be said of our sister cities; the trade that was formerly transacted by individual persons and firms has now gone into the control of more direct and rapid means of transportation—the railroads. The transfer of property at this port does not seem to be necessary. The continuous rail connections throughout the land, except perhaps in some heavy articles, have done away with this expense; the speedy transit of property in these days and lower rates of freight by rail supersedes the slow and uncertain transportation by lake and canal. Hence the many merchants that once lined the old Cuyahoga river have dwindled away year after year, so that out of the thirty-five business firms that were established on the dock in 1845 none remain except the Union elevator and the few lines of steamers now running in connection with railroads.

The prosperity of our city up to 1837 and consequent advance in real estate directed the attention of many of our citizens to speculate in landed property. Among the go-ahead men that were attracted by this movement and a desire for gain was Mr. James S. Clark, who owned much property on the South Side, also on Columbus, Michigan, Champlain and Seneca streets. He had much faith in the future of that portion of the city. The general idea with him was to divert the trade and travel from Superior street to Columbus, Canal and Michigan. He claimed that the country travel from the south and west could be diverted to this route in consequence of the more easy grade, and avoid the steep hills leading to and up Superior street. To further his object the Columbus street bridge was built, and beyond Columbus street was graded, Columbus from the bridge across the flats to Canal street improved; Michigan, Canal and Champlain cut down, and the access to the top of the hill to Ontario made an easy grade to Prospect. The improvements in buildings at Mr. Clark's and his friends' expense along this route added much to the looks of this section. He caused the building of the first Catholic church on Columbus street; a large brick hotel, kept by Mathew Cozzens, on the corner of Columbus and Center street (then named Division), and directly opposite this was established a wholesale grocery house, under the control of Mr. I. S. Converse. Many other improvements were made on this line, and on the east corners of Ontario and Prospect streets were erected two very fine brick blocks, which now stand as monuments of the energy displayed in building up that part of the city in those early times.

Mr. Clark's conceptions of the growth of the city were substantially correct, but the hard times caused by overspeculation in general and relapse in trade caused many failures, and among the many that had to succumb to the pressure was the inventor of this large project. Those of us who notice the large travel and teaming through Canal and Michigan streets at this time and compare it with the meager business now done on Superior and Spring streets, may well believe that Mr. Clark's plans were well developed. The effort made to divert this trade to the canal and Michigan street route was an incitement of property owners on Superior street and the northern portions of the city to make an effort to retain their advantage. All the streets leading to the Cuyahoga river were improved. Superior street hill was cut down some twelve feet. South Water, Union, or Spring street, St. Clair and Water were graded to some extent, but not to the extent required for an easy grade to the summit. The cost of the viaduct (some $2,000,000) would have graded these streets and made that portion of the city accessible to the river, and made it a busy section. Those streets, as they now stand, are of little use, and improvements in trade and value of property will be slow unless more direct and easy communication can be had with the river and depots. The street railroads should be extended to the flats, and that property lying on the borders of the Cuyahoga river improved, and serve as a check to the desire of manufacturers to locate along the lake front some five or more miles from the square.

Now that our harbor is improved something might be done to avail ourselves of this costly undertaking by way of access to the docks. We have some 150,000 people on the West Side and 250,000 on the East Side of the city, and it is not good management to let our river property go to waste and not make some effort to improve it. The outlay on the extension of the piers up to 1833 was $29,000, and the aggregate to 1840 $124,000. This gave us at that time about twelve feet of water in the channel of the river up to the Jefferson street bridge, and up to the present period these improvements have been continued, so that we have now fully eighteen feet clear. We seem to have just appreciated what the United States government has done for us. Efforts are being made in widening the river and improving the bridges that cross its channel.

Now, about the old river bed, I am rather positive in saying that I don't believe there ever was an opening at the head of that connection, or that any sail or steam craft ever entered or went out by that channel since the survey of the city. I can recollect when there was no connection between the river proper and the old swamp, except at times of high water in the spring. Mr. L. F. Burgess informs me that he can recollect fording this outlet daily from the main land to Whisky Island after their cow, which was pastured on the island. At high water in the river the current flowed inward, and in dry times it was reversed, or the passage was closed so that you could walk across the inlet. Mr. R. K. Winslow formerly kept a boat for hunting and fishing purposes moored in this marsh, for his individual sport, but there was no access to and from the river for boats of any size. Traces of this same channel could be seen on the east side of the river, running from about the Otis elevator lot on River street, to near where the Gas Light & Coke Co. plant now stands, on Spring street, and along the line of Bath street. The water in this swale was not as deep as in the old river bed, and was easily filled up by grading of the hills and streets in that section. It was a popular place for boys to congregate and navigate with skiffs and planks, gathering sweet flag and spearing spotted pickerel, and afforded much sport to the devotees of the rod and gun. This low ground and marsh extended up the river to nearly the foot of Lighthouse street, along the river front; but after the harbor was improved and after the filling up of these lowlands the property was improved, buildings were erected and this portion of the city was required for the accommodation of the lake trade. A similar swale of marsh existed where now is located West street, running from Merwin street east to the Cuyahoga river, about where now is situated the Valley railroad freight house. By the grading of the streets south of Superior these low grounds were filled in and Merwin and Columbus were raised some four feet—in fact, the entire flat was much improved.

It has been stated that at a celebration of the opening of a large hotel on Main street, West Side, by the Buffalo Improvement Co., mention was made that the steamer Buffalo proceeded up the old river bed and passed out at the upper end, but this is a sad error; no boat ever went through by that channel. The Buffalo company made the cut from the river to the unused marsh, and made it navigable to the extent of admitting vessels drawing ten feet of water. This same steamer was chartered to give an excursion on the occasion to commemorate the event. The vessel passed through this new opening, backed out the same way she entered, and took her passengers out into the lake for a ride. They spent the night at the new hotel with a grand blow-out and ball to end the exercises.

So far as the commerce of the port of Cleveland may be considered, and the transportation of goods by canal and lake were assured, this healthy growth in that line continued up to the introduction of the railroad system in 1850. In the year 1847 much activity was manifest on the river, and we were in the height of our glory. The firms of merchants then doing business were as diversified and numerous perhaps, as at any subsequent period of time, and among those engaged in mercantile pursuits were William Mittleberger, Anson Smyth, S. B. Hutchinson & Co., Jonathan Gillett, C. Hickox & Co., George Hurlbut & Co., W. A. Otis & Co., J. Stafford & Co., D. & J. S. Griffith, Standard, Janes & Co., W. R. Eckert, M. B. Scott, C. McDonald, W. J. Gordon, Hewitt & Lyon, H. Frink & Co., S. L. Petrie, C. Bradburn & Co., Hubby & Hughes, T. N. Faber, F. W. Weiss, D. N. Barney & Co., Pease & Allen, Lemen & Spangler, A. J. Holt, A. Seymour & Co., B. F. Smith & Co., Cobb & Bishop, Doddridge & Coe, J. Morrison, R. Winslow & Co., L. F. & S. Burgess and P. Anderson. Out of all these names I know none now living except M. L. F. Burgess, Hon. E. S. Flint and the writer of this, who now trespasses on your time to call the roll of these active merchants in our annals of early settlers, that they may be handed down to posterity in memory of our active men in bygone days who did much to build up this city.

I ask your indulgence for so extending this paper, but being the last of our citizens who has the opportunity, I am able to perpetuate their names to the many who have been mentioned in our good books of the early history of the city.

The quartet then sang, "Doan Yo Cry, Ma Honey."

The President: Ladies and Gentlemen, I understand that our dinner hour is set for half past twelve, standard time. We shall yet have time to hear from our friend, Mr. H. C. Gray, of Painesville. He has long since passed his four score year. He is the only survivor, as I am told, of the members of the Constitutional Convention who framed our present Constitution; he has, therefore, seen much in the history of this state, and I have no doubt he will interest you with his reminiscences. You will now hear him.

ADDRESS OF MR. GRAY.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Early Settlers' Association:—I first wish to say that I felt highly honored when two or three years ago I was made an honorary member of your Association. It also affords me great pleasure to be present on this occasion.

I first landed in Cleveland in 1836. It is needless for me to add that the town in its then infancy gave but little promise of its present giant proportions. The inhabitants, like myself, were mostly importations from the eastern states, very few having been native and to the manor born. The lands were here, the river, the lake, and all the other natural advantages were here, but they needed men for their development, and for this reason, if for no other, the stranger who came within the gates, armed with willing hands and earnest endeavor, was welcomed as a needed and valuable acquisition. The question then was, not what is he or she financially worth, but what can they do, and according to their ability to construct—to bring order out of chaos; to make a garden out of the wilderness—to educate, to instruct or to lead in industrial, moral and intellectual pursuits, they were valued. My first acquaintance here was with J. A. Harris, husband of Mrs. J. A. Harris, one of your Vice Presidents, and who I now see before me. Mr. Harris was one of the intellectual and political leaders of the settlement, and as editor of the Herald and Gazette carried an influence among the people which was both seen and felt. The paper was printed on a hand press, and the office was located in a building which stood a little to the south of the present site of the New Johnson House. Belonging myself to the editorial and printing fraternity—for all, or about all, editors in those days were practical printers—we naturally flocked together until an acquaintance thus casually began ripened into a friendship which was lifelong in its endurance, or until the death of Mr. Harris. He was an able and a popular editor, one who gave the new settlement the right direction in its early days—laid out the chart of that thrift, industry and progress, which is the predominant characteristic of the Cleveland of today.

Since the death of Hon. William Groesbeck I am the last surviving member of the convention which framed the Ohio Constitution of 1850-51—the organic law under which we are now living.

It has been said that the young live in the future, the old in the past; today I realize the full truth and force of this. Looking backward 50 years I can scarcely realize that the 108 men, not including the eight officers, who made up that convention, have all passed away except myself.

Further on I shall speak of a few of the distinguished men who composed that body; but I first desire to call your attention to the election of the members thereof, and the time occupied in their deliberations.

The election for members of the convention was held on the first Monday in April, 1850, and those elected met in the hall of the House of Representatives of the old State House at Columbus, on Monday, the 6th day of May, 1850. An organization was effected by the election of William Medill, of Fairfield County, President, and W. H. Gill, Secretary.

The Democrats had a majority in the convention in which three parties were represented, viz: Democratic, Whig and Free Soil. Most of the members from the Western Reserve belonged to the Free Soil minority.

In my own district, consisting of the counties of Lake and Ashtabula, the Democrats and Whigs had, unavailingly, united to defeat the election of Woodbury, Hunter and myself.

The convention remained in session at Columbus until the 9th day of July, when the cholera, which prevailed to an alarming extent in Cincinnati, Columbus, Sandusky and other cities, made it impossible to secure a quorum for the transaction of business, and after much discussion an adjournment was taken, the convention deciding to reassemble at Cincinnati on Monday, the 2nd day of December, 1850. After reassembling the convention remained in session in that city until the Constitution had been prepared and adopted by the members of the convention, which adjourned sine die March 10, 1851.

On the third Tuesday in June, 1851, the Constitution as adopted by the convention was submitted to the electors of the state, with the following result :

For the Constitution.....125,564

Against the Constitution.....109,276

Majority for adoption..... 16,288

At the same election an additional detached section was submitted in the words following:

“No license to traffic in intoxicating liquors shall hereafter be granted in this state, but the General Assembly may by law provide for evils resulting therefrom.”

The vote on this section, submitted separately and fully discussed pending the election so every voter would know exactly the meaning and effect of his ballot, was as follows :

License to sell intoxicating liquors, No. . .113,237

License to sell intoxicating liquors, Yes. . .104,255

Majority against license ..... 8,982

As a member of the convention and a voter at the election, I affirm that the intent of the convention in submitting the license clause separate from the Constitution itself, was to give the voter an opportunity to express his will separate and distinct from entanglements, and no one doubted at that time that the adoption of this section at the polls would secure the entire suppression of the liquor traffic in the state of Ohio. The subterfuge that a "tax" on the evil is not a "license" was an afterthought of the liquor interest, sustained and legalized by the highest judicial authority of the state. Under the pretense of legislating against the evil effect resulting from the liquor traffic, the clearly expressed will of a majority of the voters at the Constitutional election of 1851 has been for 50 years suppressed, and the worst kind of a "license" system maintained in the face of a prohibitive constitutional enactment.

It is doubtful if there have been since the adjournment of the convention of 1851 as many eminent men assembled for a protracted period within this state as there were at that time. By a special clause inserted in the law calling the convention judges then on the bench were made eligible to election as members of the convention, the idea having been to get as much legal wisdom and ability as possible engaged in the desired work. How good the work was—how deep and well laid its foundation—how strongly the structure was completed—it is not for me to say. I can only point to the fact that with a few slight and immaterial amendments it remains to this day the organic law of the state; that the people defeated an elaborate Constitution framed and submitted to them by the convention of 1870-72, evidently deeming the old one, although a little shelf-worn, the better of the two. And thus it stands today. Under this 50-year-old Constitution, whether wise or otherwise, the great state of Ohio has made the wonderful growth and advancement which has marked its history during all that period.

Among those who were members of the Constitutional convention of 1850, and who before and afterward not only filled positions of honor and trust, but great ones, measured by their responsibilities, was the President of the convention, William Medill, who became the first Governor of the state under the new Constitution, and before and afterwards served his people well and faithfully in the halls of Congress. There, too, was Peter Hitchcock, of Geauga County, who was a member of the State Legislature, serving first two terms, viz: 1810 to 1816; during the last session named he was speaker of the House of Representatives. He was then elected to Congress, and on his return therefrom he was elected to the State Senate, and presided over that body as President. He was Supreme Judge of Ohio for 28 years—the longest term of service rendered by any judge in Ohio, and during this period he sat for six years as Chief Justice. The degree of LL. D. was conferred upon him by the Marietta and Western Reserve colleges. There was Henry Stanbury, too, a man of many friends, and a conspicuous figure in the halls of the convention. Besides being a great lawyer, he was distinguished as a highly cultured gentleman. At that time he was also attorney general of Ohio. What pleasant memories I have of him!

Joseph Vance, of Urbana, elected to Congress in 1821, and elected Governor of Ohio in 1836, holding the office two terms. Judge Swan, author of "Swan's Treatise," one of the most elaborate legal works of the century; Judge R. P. Ranney, well known to you all for his many and valuable services to his country and his neighbors, and who also became one of the Supreme Judges of the state.

William Kennon was elected to Congress and served several terms and was on the judicial bench while a member of the Constitutional convention.

Elijah Vance also rose to a judgeship, as did also Reuben Hitchcock, and S. Humphreville, the latter of Medina county. There too, we find W. S. Grosbeck, one of the most eminent attorneys of the Union, destined later to become prominent as one of the attorneys for President Andrew Johnson in the great impeachment trial; Norton S. Townsend, one of the two independent members of the State Legislature, who held the balance of power and made possible the election of S. P. Chase to the United States Senate, and also the repeal of the "Black Laws." He also served as a member of Congress, as did also Sherlock J. Andrews (at one time city judge of Cleveland), he was one of the most able, genial and kindhearted of men. David Chambers, the silver-tongued orator of his day, and Benjamin Stanton, who was Lieutenant Governor during Tod's administration. He was elected to Congress in 1853 and served three terms. He was a great open-air speaker and temperance advocate, who later moved to West Virginia, where he died. James T. Worthington, a relative of the Worthington who sat in the first Constitutional convention; Jacob Perkins, who then young in years, was a graduate of Yale. His liberal and broad sympathies made him a welcome member to all the other members of the convention.

There, again, we read the name of J. S. Kirkwood, who removed to Iowa and become Governor of that state. In this convention he was one of the most radical Democratic members, but ten years later when the crisis of the Rebellion came upon the country he was a loyal and earnest supporter of President Lincoln, and stands today preeminent as the great war Governor of Iowa during that stormy period. When R. B. Hayes became President of the United States, he selected Kirkwood for a member of his official household, and entrusted him with the portfolio of Secretary of the Interior. Then, last but not least, I mention among this galaxy of eminent men, Otway Curry, a poet of distinction, at that time and still sometimes read. Thinking of the past, viewing in the mind's mirror the features and the forms of the men I have mentioned as they were known by me fifty years ago, in the words of Curry I might ask:

Shall things material change again
And wholly be forgot?
And round us only God remain,
A universe of thought?

We know not well—we cannot know:
Our reason's glimmering light
Can nothing but the darkness show
Of our surrounding night.

Such is a brief and hasty review of the Constitutional convention of 1850-51, and of the public services of a few of the eminent men who sat in that convention. They have all passed away but their works do live after them, and whether we applaud or decry, praise or censure cannot reanimate their forms or penetrate their ears.

In thinking over the past and drawing before me in the mind's mirror those forms, I am made strangely aware of the flight of time, when I reflect that not one, except myself, of the 108 members of that convention is now living—all having passed to the silent majority. I turn to the griefs of later years, and the lines of Barry Cornwall come to me, and I like to think of them.

Touch us gently, Time,
Gently, as we sometimes glide
Through a quiet dream.
Humble voyagers are we
Husband, wife and children three.
One is lost, an angel fled
To the azure overhead.
Touch us gently, Time.
We've not proud nor soaring wings;
Our ambition, our content
Lies in simple things.
Humble voyagers are we,
O'er life's dim unsounded sea,
Seeking only some calm clime,
Touch us gently, gentle Time.

The quartet then sang "Like a Woodland Rose."

The hour for luncheon having arrived, the meeting adjourned until 1:30 o'clock p. m.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

The meeting was again called to order by President Hamilton.

The quartet then sang "The Merry Four."

The President: We have with us this afternoon, not an old pioneer, but a young man, whose name is S. D. Dodge; while not a veteran pioneer himself, he is the son of one, being the son of our old Treasurer, George C. Dodge, and a nephew of the old settler, Wilson Dodge. He has held the position here of United States District Attorney for some years, with great credit, and I have no doubt you will be pleased to hear him.

ADDRESS BY S. D. DODGE.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Early Settlers' Association:

I shall always take a great interest in this Association because my father was one of its organizers, and my mother was a member of it until her death a few months ago. I remember some twenty years ago when this Society was first established. I remember how Harvey Rice used to come down to my father's house to consult with him as to its organization, and I remember some of those earlier meetings some twenty years ago when Judge Tilden and Judge Ranney, R. P. Spaulding, Solon Burgess and Dudley Baldwin and others who are now gone, were conspicuous figures. I also remember at one of those earlier meetings of a remark my father made which amused me at the time, and which may amuse you. The Society at that time decided, very wisely, to elect a lady as Vice-President of this Association, and after they had done so, my father, who was a great reader of Dickens and very fond of him, arose and said: "Ladies and Gentlemen, Sarah Gamp has been vindicated and Betsy Prigg has been squelched. There is a Mrs. Harris." (Laughter and applause). And I am glad to see that there is still a Mrs. Harris in the Association. But that generation has passed away, and those of us who were of the younger generation have now advanced a step, and our children have taken the place we occupied.

We of the younger generation, of course, cannot give you any reminiscences. Anything I may say about the early settlers would be what we lawyers call hearsay evidence, and therefore not competent. But the Good Book says if there be prophets among you they shall prophesy. So we younger men can prophesy without objection. We can look forward to the time when we will be sitting in the seats now occupied with you with our lives not before us, but behind us, only waiting till the shadows are a little longer drawn, and we can predict that your sons and your daughters will be the same honored and respected citizens that you are. Not pioneers, perhaps, nor strong with the struggles which come from hardships encountered and struggles overcome in planting a city in the wilderness, but strong because the same pioneer blood and the same pioneer character has come down from ancestor to descendant. I am one of those that believe that blood is thicker than water, and I believe that the children of the early settlers will do their part to shoulder the responsibilities and take up the burden that you leave behind. Some of us are not so old or not so young but that we have seen this city grow from forty to four hundred thousand, and some of us are not so old but that we may see it grow to twice four hundred thousand. Are we willing to do as much for the growth and progress of this city as you have done for its birth? I believe, and I am no pessimist, when I say that the children of the early settlers will do their part to make this city a better city and this nation a better nation. The descendants of the pioneers, those who have in them the strain of blood of those who came here in early days, those who bent their struggles of early days; it is your children who ought to know more than anyone else the worth of this Republic, and see to it that it is preserved in its integrity; for if the children of the fathers and mothers of the Republic are not willing to guide and direct it, and guide and direct it rightly, how can we expect those to do it who come here from foreign lands and become citizens after they have been here but a few years? And I say if there is any use in this Society at all, it is to make your children feel the importance of their birth right and their ancestry; and although they may not be able to be pioneers, yet they may be able to take up the work in the spirit in which it was conceived, and that is, to do justice to all men, to promote the widest liberty and to obey the laws.

The quartet then sang "They kissed, I saw them do it."

The President then introduced Rev. Lathrop Cooley, who addressed the meeting as follows:

ADDRESS BY MR. COOLEY.

Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: It has always been a great pleasure to me to be present upon these occasions, and yet there is a degree of sadness when we miss so many familiar faces. There must be something very sad to Mr. Gray, when he remembers more than one hundred familiar faces contemplating a document that should be the polar star of the great State of Ohio, when they are all gone but himself. Shadows come up before him and those familiar names cast, I say, a sadness over us, and yet there is a gladness. Mr. Gray ought to be glad, and we all ought to be glad who have known the history of such men as were mentioned by him this forenoon, whose names are fragrant with intelligence.

I had thought upon this occasion of occupying your attention for a short time with the early rise of Mormonism upon the Western Reserve, which took place in the fourth decade of this century, but when I thought over the matter, it came to me that it might not be a subject in which you might be interested, although I, at the time, was much interested. I knew the President of the Mormon church in its early life, I mean Mr. Snow. I might say I knew his sister better, because we once took a horseback ride together, and in that early time we rode two on one horse. This lady, for she was a lady when I knew her—she was not a Mormon then—she afterwards became one of the principal actors in the Sealing House in Salt Lake City, where they have the scenery of the Garden of Eden, one man representing the cloven foot, the devil, and one woman representing Mother Eve. When they cast about to find the most beautiful woman in all Salt Lake City, they graciously received in that high honorable position, according to their traditions and customs, the sister of the present President of the Mormon church, Miss Snow, who taught school in our neighborhood when the country was new, and with whom I had the pleasure of riding horse-back one Saturday afternoon. So you see, after taking a horse-back ride with Mother Eve, I belong to the old settlers, without a doubt.

I pass by today the fourth decade, and I am going to take up a few things that belong to the last decade of the first half of the century. Twice the clock strikes twelve throughout the twenty-four hours. Twice we pass periods in a century. We are at the evening of the last half of the most marvellous of centuries, and I look upon the last decade of the first half of the century as the most significant, the most prophetic and most important of all the decades of the century, and I will briefly tell you why. When I entered that decade sixty years ago, of course, we had the political contest then. Harrison, an Ohio man, living in a cabin as the rest of us did at an early date, was before the people to be elected as a Whig candidate to the presidential chair. Hard cider they said he drank, and lived in a cabin, and we said all right, log cabin, hard cider and coon skins would bring him into the chair, and it did. Log cabins stood in the city of Cleveland at that time, and log cabins were everywhere. Early customs were prominent, and it swept the whole land and brought him to the presidential chair, and in thirty days the undertaker came and prepared him for another seat. In thirty days Harrison was gone and Tyler took his place—Tyler, whose name is not very fragrant for this reason: we all admire a straightforward, honest man. In the language of Henry Clay, "I would rather be a man than to be President of the United States and lose my manhood."

Some of you perhaps remember what was called the "Tyler coat." It was so made that you could have one color on one side and another color on the other side, and it was made so that you could turn it and it looked then as though it was made for that side. The old people remember something about that. And why? Because Tyler turned away from the platform adopted by the Whigs, changed, and when Congress instituted or rather inaugurated the United States Bank he vetoed it. But that is not the particular thing I wish to mention especially.

When I entered this decade in the forties, there was not a sewing machine in the work room, not a reaper or mower in the field; there was not one foot of telegraph wire stretched overhead or under foot or under the seas, not one. There was not a photograph in all the land. We had no California gold, she had not given up her treasures to us. Slavery, though it did not extend from the gulf to the lakes and from sea to sea, yet here in Ohio, under the shadow of Oberlin College, men were taken, chained and taken back into bondage for no crime save the color of their skins. I wonder if there are any of the Oberlin boys here remember that load of hay that was full of darkies. You know the old saying, "There is a darkey in the wood pile." In those days there was a load of hay that went to the lake full of darkies. I remember looking upon the faces of some men that came here from Virginia to get their slaves; they got them and started back with them, and the boys turned out, headed them off and got out a writ of kidnapping. Of course they must be brought up to Elyria, and they had to wait there until they could send to Virginia to get evidence that these were their slaves. I was in the court house when that matter came up for trial, and they very willingly said, "Yes, we will put the slaves in the prison here in Elyria until you come back with your evidence." And they put them in, but they said that this man was a blacksmith by trade and he knew the strength of iron, and that he broke the bars and in less than twenty-four hours he was on his way to Canada. When a man's feet touched the soil of Canada he was free, his shackles fell; when a man breathed Canadian air he was a slave no longer. It was not so in Ohio. That was the condition of things away back there in the forties.

Now, before that decade closed there was stored up in the hearts of the people on this Western Reserve a sentiment. First free soil, second, free men; they went together. I was with a little company in this city in an upper room; (I know not one surviving today except myself of that little company). We were looking out for the organization of the movement that should sweep slavery from this land of liberty and break the chains that shackled more than five million of men under our flag and our Constitution. John A. Foote was there, son of Governor Foote of Connecticut, and brother of Commodore Foote, and old father Keep was there in that convention from Oberlin, that old man who was the first President of the Board of Oberlin College. And when they decided that they would open the doors of the college to all men and women of all classes, whatever might be the color of their skin, it was Father Keep of Oberlin who decided it. The Board was equally divided, but Father Keep being the chairman, he arose and cast the vote and opened the door to all alike. John A. Foote arose and said, "Friends, we have got a big work on hand, and we need all the help we can get, and I propose Father Keep engage in a word of prayer." Was there ever anything like that before or since in a political gathering? We wanted all the help we could have. Think of a little company in an upper room! Edwin Cowles, I think was there, but that company is all gone, but their work has not gone. Their work started there, and this Western Reserve has been the spouting ground of grand old trees whose branches reach heavenward to-day, trees of liberty, and trees of culture and intelligence. Here in Cleveland was the man that secured the law organizing free schools for all in the State of Ohio, whose monument stands in a near-by park today. Here in Ohio were the principles started that lifted up the people to a high degree of culture and intelligence. I am not surprised to know that Mr. Bancroft, a man whose acquaintance I made more than forty years ago, said, "I have seen much of the world, but for intelligence and home life I know of no land like the Western Reserve."

I heard the Governor of Massachusetts once say before an audience, speaking of Garfield's life and of his last days, he observed that there was an illustration of an American home, for the first act of that brave, true man was to press the lips of his mother who first kissed him, after he had taken the oath to perform the duties growing out of his position as the chief magistrate of this great Republic. But in this country we had these influences; they were started, this great party had a small beginning; in the forties it grew, it took about twelve years, a pretty small boy. It takes a boy about twenty years now to become a man, but this boy got to be pretty strong in sixty, and they brought out a man in sixty who was one of the common people, but they worked like sixty to get there, and they got there.

Now, let me go back a little. What influences did we need to succeed in that wonderful enterprise? Prejudice was strong against the North. I was in Virginia, I was from the Western Reserve. I was never accustomed to talk much when I was young; I have done all that since—I can talk enough now. I remember the lesson that the old mother gave to her boy when he brought in a string of fish. He was in the habit of talking a good deal. She says, “Now, my son, do you know why these fish are not swimming in the water and having a nice time?” and he says, “No mother, only I caught them,” and she says, “Don’t you know if they had kept their mouths shut they wouldn’t have been caught?” I didn’t say much in those days among the Southerners. They knew I was from the North. I kept quiet but I thought a good deal. There was a work to be done, and it seemed to me it was a herculean task in this country.

In the early part of this decade the sewing machine and the mowing machine were brought out in the same year, and the telegraph wire was stretched in 1844 from Baltimore to Washington. The Democratic party was holding its convention in Baltimore, and Morse had stretched a single wire from Baltimore to Washington. The Democratic party nominated James K. Polk for President, and that was the first dispatch that went over the wire, and they knew it in Washington before they knew it in Baltimore, and it was a great marvel; it was a wonderful thing. The people marvelled about that telegraph wire. An old lady up in Ridgeville—it was not Mrs. Harris by any means, though I had the pleasure of knowing Mrs. Harris away back there fifty years ago—but this old lady said, “I don’t see how the letters can get through that little hole in the insulator, in the glass on the pole.” Her idea was the letters were going to be stretched out on the wire. But a darkey down in Washington got it the best. He says, “I can explain the whole thing.” “Well,” they said, “go ahead and explain it then.” Says he, “Supposing a great big dog, so big that it reached from Baltimore to Washington.” “Well,” they said, “there never was such a big dog as that.” “But, then, you have got to suppose it or I can’t explain it.” “Well, go ahead then.” “You step on his tail in Baltimore, and he will bark in Washington.” That explained the whole thing. Who dreamed then there would be such a web-work of wire around the world, that I could speak to my son traveling in northern Europe in the morning and receive an answer in the evening? Who dreamed anything of that kind? I did not, nor you did not. We have seen that work go on. It was a necessity; the sewing machine was a necessity; the reaper and mower was a necessity, and the photograph. I claim that the photograph is a great civilizer. It is a gospel of affection and tenderness. What woman is there who is not better because she can look upon the face of a loved one taken from the cradle? How many times she opens the drawer and looks upon that little face, the tears come and she drops upon her knees and thanks God for the promise, “Suffer little children to come unto me and forbid them not.” What would we not give if we had the photographs of the fathers back generations after generations? How I would like to look upon the faces of my illustrious ancestors. In the city of Boston I went to the historical rooms and I traced back my mother’s family for nine generations, to 1631. How I would have liked to have had those faces all along the generations. We couldn’t have them.

Of the ten decades, and we are in the evening of the last, no decade, to my mind, compares with this decade, the last of the first half of the century.

Now, this is about all that I have to say. There was a man raised up in that decade, in our own community a little east of here, in a cabin—a boy ten or fifteen years of age, working, chopping wood, anything that he could do to help his father, a boy in the woods of Orange township, who afterwards became President of the United States. Such were the influences started in that most marvellous of all decades.

Now, I am going to conclude. I did not intend to make a long speech, but this may be the last time I shall address you, for life is very uncertain. But I believe, my dear friends, that this is not all. I believe there is a land of eternal spring and immortal beauty, where none grow old. I believe there will be a time of reunion on the other side. I cannot believe that I shall never know anything more of General Elwell, whose voice we heard one year ago in our Association. I believe we shall strike glad hands on the other side. Let us so live that when the hour comes, not like the galley slave who leaves his task to lie down on a bed of death, but like the weary traveller with a life well spent, with echoes coming back to cheer us, we find the way to that undiscovered country, from whose bourne no traveller returns, and it will be well with us.

The quartet then sang "A Negro Melody."

The President: We were to have been addressed by the Rev. J. A. Rutledge, but he wrote me only very recently that he had been disappointed in not being able to attend. I very much regret that this eloquent divine was not able to be here on this occasion and give you a short address.

The quartet then sang "Coronation," the audience standing and joining in the singing.

The audience then sang the Doxology, led by the quartet, and Rev. Lathrop Cooley pronounced the following benediction:

BENEDICTION BY REV. LATHROP COOLEY.

Gracious Father, dismiss us with Thy blessing, go with us through the journey of life, hand us down to our graves in peace, gather us home at last to enjoy the fullness of Thy presence, through Jesus Christ, our Lord, Amen.

Sketches of Deceased Members.

MRS. ELIZABETH BARKER.

Mrs. Elizabeth Vanderwerker Barker, widow of the late Benaiah Barker, was born in New York, of distinguished Knickerbocker ancestry, February 12, 1810; died March 26, 1900. She was the last surviving charter member of Plymouth church and in earlier days was most active and influential in church work. Her late pastor says, "She was a woman run in a grand mold, of heroic proportions. I often envied her the definiteness and vigor of her opinions. And what grand patience and what superb hope was hers. To have ministered to her, to have been anything to her shall be a precious memory." She was a wonderful and beautiful woman at 90 years of age. Mr. and Mrs. Barker came to Cleveland in 1848. Mr. Barker was one of the leaders in the abolition movement, and the founder of Plymouth church. The parents are survived by two children, Mrs. Frances E. Shipherd and James W. Barker.

JONATHAN FORD CARD.

Jonathan Ford Card, who died May 25, 1900, was one of the old citizens who helped to connect the former pioneer days with those of the present. He was born on January 8, 1815, in the village of Chagrin, which is now known as Willoughby, Lake County, Ohio, to which place his parents moved in the fall of 1814 from Newport, N. Y. He was one of six children born to Joseph and Mary Ford Card. His earliest days were spent in a small log cabin, which stood on a hill, over which the Lake Shore railroad tracks now have their course. At the age of ten, however, he found himself back in Newport, N. Y. The family did not stay there long, but returned to Ohio in 1825, where Joseph Card became actively engaged in the business world; being at one time postmaster of Willoughby. On his way to Ohio it may be mentioned that he took passage on a canal boat on which Governor De Witt Clinton was en route to Buffalo, to celebrate the completion of the Erie Canal.

Mr. Card received his earliest education in the common schools, but in 1830 he completed his studies in a select academy. They consisted of chemistry, rhetoric, grammar, and Latin. His parents wished him to stay at school for several more years, but as he said, he was possessed of a burning desire to get to work and accomplish something in the world of business. His first start was very unpromising, as he was obliged to do all the drudgery of a little store and sleep in a bunk under the counter at night. In 1832, his health giving out, he was obliged to take a trip up the lakes.

Probably this trip did much to acquaint the boy—he was but eighteen years of age—with a portion of the world in which he was to become actively engaged in later years. He made another trip to Chicago a few years later, being sent there by his former employer to collect a large sum of money. On this trip he visited a great many towns, to some of which he later returned, either to live or establish some business. In the spring of 1834 he first started in business for himself by buying, in partnership, a grocery and general country store. At that time a railroad company establishing connections with Chagrin, he bought a number of shares in the company, and in these and many other ways he gradually became identified with the world of business.

On August 26, 1835, he married Miss Maria Phelps, a daughter of Samuel Phelps, who was a well-to-do resident of Painesville. With her he lived most happily for fifty years. In 1847 he moved to Fairport. The couple had five children born to them. Mrs. Card died on April 28, 1887.

In about 1847, it may be said, Mr. Card started in earnest on his remarkable business career. He had been engaged in a number of enterprises in the smaller towns of Ohio, but it was not until in 1857 that he first came to Cleveland. In that year he came to this city and engaged in business with Daniel P. Rhodes under the name of Rhodes & Card, dealers in coal and pig iron. From that time until his retirement from active business his life was given to establishing and pursuing many business enterprises. Many of the largest concerns of this State, notably those dealing in coal, owe their beginning to the activity of Jonathan Ford Card.

Thirteen years ago, in a room not far from that in which he breathed his last in the Forest City House, Mr. Card's wife died. For a number of years Mr. and Mrs. Card made their home at the hotel in the summer time, passing their winters in Florida, although they spent much time with a daughter in Toledo. Since Mrs. Card's death Mr. Card continued to make his home at the same hotel, going south for the winter. When Mr. Card returned from Florida this spring he went to Toledo and visited his daughter there for a time, coming to the Forest City House the first of April. He had many investments, but aside from looking after these he attended to but little business, although his mind was remarkably bright.

Mr. Card went driving a number of times the week before his death and it is thought he contracted a slight cold during one of these outings and that it developed into pneumonia. Sunday he became ill and almost from the first it was seen that he would not, on account of his advanced age, be able to resist the disease. His daughters, Mrs. William A. Gosline, of Toledo, and Mrs. D. M. Brigham, of Milwaukee, were telegraphed to and came at once to his bedside. Although he was critically ill, his mind remained bright and active almost to the last. Wednesday he wanted his nurse to read the newspapers to him, but she told him he was too weak. Then he asked her to read the proceedings of the City Council so that he could see what had been done concerning the proposition of the Little Consolidated Street Railway Company, he being a rather heavy shareholder in that company. Thursday night he became unconscious and was in that state much of the time until his death.

The only immediate relatives left by Mr. Card are his daughters, Mrs. Gosline and Mrs. Brigham, and a third daughter, Mrs.

James F. Rhodes, who with her husband was making a tour of Europe. Two sons of the deceased died some years ago. Mr. Card was widely known and respected in the business community, being one of the pioneers in the development of the Cleveland coal and iron ore traffic. He was the founder and for a long time the head of the Card Coal Company, and it was this company that did most to make his name known through this part of the country. He was cheerful up to the time when unconsciousness gave warning of approaching death, and save for a cough he suffered but little.

WARREN H. CORNING.

Warren H. Corning, another of Cleveland's foremost citizens, passed away at 8:15 o'clock Sunday morning, September 3, 1899, at his residence, No. 860 Euclid Avenue, after a long illness. He had been breaking down for the past several years.

Warren Holmes Corning, retired merchant, was born at Painesville, O., February 18, 1841. His grandfather was a member of an old colonial family and a descendant of Samuel Corning, the first of his line in the new world. When young Corning was five years old, his father took the family to Cleveland, but remained only two years. He then went to Newark by way of the canal.

In 1853 the family returned to Cleveland. Warren graduated from the Cleveland High School and at the age of sixteen years entered a wholesale grocer's establishment as clerk. After three years he engaged in manufacturing and distilling with his father in this city, and when later the business was removed to Peoria on account of certain local advantages, he still retained his home in Cleveland.

About the year 1887 Mr. Corning sold the Monarch Distilling Co. at Peoria, Ill., the Distilling & Cattle Feeding Co., and retired from the company. He made large investments in various institutions. Among these are the Standard Sewing Machine Co., the Wick Banking & Trust Co., the First National Bank and the Guardian Trust Co. Mr. Corning was a director of the last named institution and he took an active interest in the management of all the various concerns.

In later days Mr. Corning passed most of his time at the beautiful home on Euclid Avenue or in travel and recreation.

Mr. Corning was frequently called to New York by financial matters or pleasure and was a member of the Metropolitan and New Clubs and the Ohio Society in that city. He also belonged to the Union, Roadside and Country Clubs of Cleveland.

Mr. Corning was married to Miss Mary Helen, daughter of Henry Wick of this city, on December 7, 1864, the union being blessed with six children, all but one of whom are still living. They are Lesile S. (deceased), Henry W., Mary A., Adele, Helen and Oliver Payne Corning.

MRS. LUCY A. DODGE.

Mrs. Lucy A. Dodge, widow of the late George C. Dodge, died March 25, 1900, at the family residence, corner of Dodge street and Euclid avenue. Her death terminated an illness of ten weeks, in the last week of which she was expected to die at any time. She was almost eighty-three years of age, and it is to her advanced age that her last illness is attributed. Drs. H. H. Powell and E. D. Burton have been in constant attendance. They informed the family a week ago that no hope could be entertained for Mrs. Dodge's recovery.

Mrs. Dodge was a member of one of the oldest families in this city, and a member of the Early Settlers' Association. She came to this city in 1820, when a child three years of age. She was born in Manchester, Conn., in November, 1817. The journey to this city was made by her father, Dr. Elijah Burton, and the family, in a wagon. In 1835 she was married to the late George C. Dodge, who, until his death in 1883, was prominent in public affairs. He was at one time County treasurer, and bore the distinction of being the only Democratic treasurer ever elected. At the time of her marriage, Mrs. Dodge began house-keeping in a house which stood on the site of the Sanford block, on Superior street, just west of Seneca street. Later they moved to the house now known as the Gardner home. In 1851 the present home of the Dodge family was built, and there Mrs. Dodge had lived ever since. She was the mother of six children, five of whom are living, namely, Mrs. Anna W. Buell, Wilson S. Dodge, George C. Dodge, of Washington, D. C., Mortimer H. Dodge, and Samuel D. Dodge, ex-United States Attorney. Mrs. Frances D. Hutchins, wife of Horace A. Hutchins of New York city, who died in 1889, was also a daughter of Mrs. Dodge. She leaves eleven grandchildren and eight great grandchildren. Dr. E. D. Burton of East Cleveland, was a brother of Mrs. Dodge. Wilson S. Dodge is at the present time in Los Angeles, Cal., and is very ill. He was the only member of the family who was not present at the deathbed.

Mrs. Dodge was always remarkable for her love for her home, and she preferred to remain there to seeking prominence in society circles, which the standing of the family gave her entrance to. She attended the Third Presbyterian church, though not a member of it. She had always taken much interest in the Early Settlers' Association, of which her husband was one of the founders, and until his death the treasurer.

MRS. GERTRUDE HALTNORTH.

Mrs. Gertrude Haltnorth died at her late home, No. 1123 Case avenue, Friday evening, October 27, 1899. She had been for some little time suffering from the infirmities of old age, being over eighty years old.

Mrs. Haltnorth was born in Germany in 1819, and came to this country sixty-three years ago. After residing a short time in Buffalo she came to Cleveland, where she resided ever since. She was one of the oldest living members of the Pioneers' Association, and was also a supporter of the Altenheim.

Mrs. Haltnorth leaves three daughters, one son, ten grandchildren, and six great grandchildren. The children are Mrs. Otto Hessenmueller, Mrs. J. C. Weideman, Miss Sophia Haltnorth and Ferdinand Diebolt.

WILLIAM HANSEN JAYRED.

After an illness of several weeks W. H. Jayred died at his home in East Cleveland early Thursday morning, November, 1899.

William Hansen Jayred was born August 8, 1831, at Paterson, N. J., the oldest son of Frederick and Eliza Carey Jayred. He came to East Cleveland township (then Euclid) with his parents in the fall of 1833, by the old stage route.

At the age of fourteen he returned to his birthplace to visit relatives, and while there an attack of lung trouble made a sea voyage necessary to restore him to health. Thus began a seven years' life as a sailor on the high seas. During that time he became acquainted with nearly every part of the Southern hemisphere, spending about a year in Australia, and visiting China, Japan, the East Indies, and the Philippine Islands, and the continents of Africa and South America; also Hawaii, then known as the Sandwich Islands, while the inhabitants were still in the savage state.

At the age of twenty-one Mr. Jayred returned to Ohio, and for the greater part of the next fourteen years he followed the lakes as mate of various vessels. Within this period occurred the civil war, and Mr. Jayred first served his country as a "Squirrel Hunter," in the defense of Cincinnati at the time of Kirby Smith's invasion of Kentucky. The next three years were spent in the navy on the Mound City, in the Mississippi River service. He was discharged on account of impaired health, but afterward re-enlisted and served until the close of the war, when he returned to his home and family.

On September 6, 1858, at Milwaukee, William Jayred married Mrs. Emma Lock Linghan. Since 1862 their home has been in East Cleveland village, and here were born their children, all except the eldest.

Mr. Jayred's wife, his sons, William H. and Charles W. Jayred, and his daughters, Mrs. Horace Parr, Mrs. Joseph Birkenfeld, and Mrs. Florence Money, survive him. Mrs. Olney Ramsdell, of Lorain, and Mrs. Hugh Graham, of East Cleveland, are sisters of his, who was himself the last of four brothers.

While still a young boy he became a member of the old Presbyterian church, but after settling down from his roving life he again united with the same church upon profession of faith. He was justice of the peace for East Cleveland township eighteen years. A prominent member of the Grand Army of the Republic, he was a staunch friend to the old soldiers, as many whom he assisted to obtain a pension can testify. He was also a member of the commission for the relief of indigent soldiers.

For those who knew Mr. Jayred it is not necessary to recount his fine qualities of heart and mind. Always a wide reader, he possessed a fund of information and anecdote that made him an interesting conversationalist. Neighbors, friends, and fellow townsmen regret the loss of a man of steadfast principle, upright life, and sterling character.

MRS. JAMES KYSER.

On October 10, 1899, after a useful and active life of seventy-eight years, Mrs. James Kyser died suddenly from heart disease, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. J. W. S. Webb, 729 North Logan avenue.

Before her first marriage she was Mary Amanda Strong, daughter of Rodney and Sally Taylor Strong, the fourth of a family of five sisters, two brothers, and two half brothers by her father's marriage with Miss Mary Taylor, a sister of his first wife. Her parents lived in Willoughby when she was born, September 10, 1821, but in the spring of 1829 or 1830 they moved to Col-lamer.

When Mrs. Kyser was twelve years old she went by stage to Connecticut, where she remained three years with her grandmother and aunt. After her return to Ohio she taught a district school, and in 1839 was married to Mr. Johnson Ogram. They made their home in Euclid, where was born their only child, a daughter, who died at the age of twenty months. Mr. Ogram died in 1846, and in 1850 Mrs. Ogram was married to Mr. James Kyser by Rev. E. Adams, rector of St. Paul's church.

Mrs. Kyser formerly belonged to the Episcopal church, but for the last ten years of her life was a member of Plymouth Congregational church. Her parents were among the early settlers of the Western Reserve, her mother having ridden from Connecticut on horse-back, the trip taking six weeks, and Mrs. Kyser lived on the Reserve all her life except a short time in Michigan, and in Pennsylvania after her marriage to Mr. Kyser. Had she lived four months and ten days longer they would have reached the golden anniversary of their wedding.

MR. JAMES KYSER.

In the death of Mr. James Kyser, which occurred April 11, 1900, at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. W. S. Webb, just six months after the death of his wife, there has passed away another early settler of Cleveland, the story of whose early life is a tale of pioneer times.

He was born at Geneva, N. Y., May 12, 1818, and was the next to the youngest of eleven children, all of whom grew up to marry and have families. In December, 1832, his parents started westward with him and five other children, shipping most of their goods by schooner from Buffalo and journeying by land with two teams, part of the way on the beach of the lake. Arriving at Cleveland, they stayed some time at Brainard's Tavern, about four miles out on what was then the old Wooster turnpike, and at Watkin's Tavern, near what is now the corner of Euclid and East Madison avenues, afterwards securing the only house they could find, one near the present entrance to Lake View Cemetery.

For six dollars an acre Mr. Kyser's father was offered a farm on Euclid avenue opposite the old Dunham house near Dunham avenue, and for the same price forty acres at what is now the corner of Euclid and Case avenues, where St. Paul's church stands, but land in that section was too poor to raise good wheat and corn, so he bought some land in Parma, Ohio, for three dollars an acre, which, in 1837, during the excitement over the culture of mulberry trees and the raising of silk worms, he sold to be used for that purpose. After this the family moved to Dover, Ohio, where the father bought a farm.

In January, 1843, Mr. Kyser married Miss Mary A. Loder, and in April, 1844, they started farther west with a yoke of three-year-old steers and a three-year-old heifer led behind the wagon, which was covered in emigrant style. For a year they lived in Tecumseh and near Ypsilanti, beginning their housekeeping in a log cabin with no chimney, the floor made of bass-wood logs split in two with the smooth side up, and the bedstead made by means of poles placed in holes bored in the logs of the hut.

The following spring they returned to Ohio, and in the spring of 1847 Mr. Kyser bought out the stock of W. H. Van Tine, Sr., who had a grocery store in the basement of the late Irad Kelly's building on Superior street, opposite Bank street. From W. J. Gordon's wholesale grocery house he bought some goods, and with these and some coffee sacks filled with corn, empty tea chests and flour barrels, gave the impression of carrying considerable stock, in spite of the small capital he was able to invest. At the end of the year he found he had made a success of his venture. At this time he lived near Rocky River and used to walk in from there on Monday mornings and back to his family on Sunday mornings, meanwhile boarding and lodging in his little basement store.

The following fall he moved his family to the city, bought a horse and wagon and began to deliver his goods, being the first man in Cleveland to do so, and thereby establishing the custom of free delivery of goods. He also started the city express, having slates for receiving orders at Huntington and Brook's crockery store on Water street, Stair's seed store where the Wilshire block now stands, and at Jewett and Worthington's book store on Superior street near where E. L. Dodd's shoe store now is.

When the old St. Paul's church, at the corner of Euclid and Sheriff street, was burned, Mr. Kyser lived in the first house on Sheriff street back of the church. The family were awakened from a sound sleep to find themselves apparently in the midst of a sea of flames, and the shock and fright to the wife resulted in an illness of three months from which she died, leaving Mr. Kyser with one child, a son. Mr. Kyser afterwards married Mrs. Mary Strong Ogram, widow of Johnson Ogram and daughter of Rodney Strong. They are survived by their only child, Mrs. J. W. S. Webb, Mr. Kyser's son by his former marriage having died in December, 1885.

MRS. ANN H. NORTON.

The oldest member of the Early Settlers' Association, and one of the oldest residents of Cleveland, Mrs. Ann H. Norton, passed away June 8, 1900, at the home of her son, Walter Norton, at No. 110 Vienna street.

She had passed through a life spanning almost a century, with but very little sickness, and when she reached the age of almost ninety-seven years her faculties were but slightly impaired, the only sign of old age being in her appearance and a slight deafness. Otherwise she was hale and hearty, and was constantly in the best of spirits.

Mrs. Norton was born in New York city August 30, 1803, where she lived until 1839, when she came to this city to live with her husband, Captain James Norton, to whom she was married a short time previous. Captain Norton was a sailor on the lakes, and was master of one of the first boats ever propelled by steam here, his brother having been master of her at the time of her advent on the lakes. To the couple were born five children, only two of whom survive the mother. They are Walter Norton, with whom she made her home, and Mrs. Eleanor Treat, who lives with her daughter, Mrs. Pratt, on Fairmount street.

In some respects the life of Mrs. Norton was eventful and remarkable. She saw almost the complete development of this nation. She passed through four of its wars, although at the time of the struggle of 1812 she was almost too young to know much of the significance of what was going on. When she was a young woman, in 1824, she attended the reception at Castle Square Garden given to General Lafayette, and was introduced to him by a mutual friend.

Coming to Cleveland at the time she did, she passed through the most eventful period of its history, and she knew it from its early days to its present metropolitan development. She was a member of the Early Settlers' Association from its inception, and it is said that she never missed a meeting of this body. In spite of her advanced years she was one of the spryest of women, going about at all times unassisted. She walked with a cane, although she never used it for the purpose of helping herself to walk. She was a prominent member of the Euclid Avenue Methodist Episcopal church, and was a constant attendant at the services of that church until very recently.

JAMES W. OGRAM.

The funeral of James W. Ogram, a pioneer of Cleveland, occurred April 22 at the family homestead, No. 4121 Euclid avenue, East Cleveland. Mr. Ogram was ill only a week, having suffered from a severe attack of pneumonia. A large number of friends attended the funeral services, which were conducted by Rev. H. M. Ingham, former rector of St. Paul's Episcopal church, East Cleveland, but who is at present rector of the Episcopal church of Jefferson. The Episcopal service was read and a quartet sang. The remains were buried in Lake View Cemetery. The pall-bearers were sons and sons-in law of Mr. Ogram.

Mr. Ogram came to Cleveland from England in 1827 when he was only nine years old. He had resided in Cleveland ever since, and was for a long time a shoe merchant on Superior street. At the time of his marriage to Miss Sarah Jane Strong he took up his residence at his wife's home in East Cleveland, and continued to reside there up to the time of his death. Mr. Ogram was in his eighty-second year and is survived by his wife and nine of his twelve children. The children are Mrs. C. M. Adams, of St. Louis; Mrs. Clark D. Adams, of East Cleveland; Captain E. M. Ogram, of East Cleveland; R. D. Ogram, of Chicago; Dr. A. J. Ogram, of Illinois; Miss J. L. Ogram, Mrs. S. R. Mason, and Mrs. Homer Roberts, of East Cleveland, and Mrs. Beaumont Parks, of Chicago.

MRS. ORINDA E. THOMAS.

After an illness of three months, caused by nervous prostration, Mrs. Orinda E. Thomas, of this city, died Thursday morning, March 23, 1900, at 3 o'clock. Mrs. Thomas was the widow of the late Charles Thomas, who died several months ago, and was very well known and liked. She was sixty-nine years of age, and was a pioneer resident of this city, having come here when Cleveland was but sparsely settled, from Vermont in a wagon when she was but eight years old.

The funeral was held from her late residence, No. 11 Miles avenue.
